1 - Group Class Policy:

Et cetera: And the rest of such things

Commonly abbreviated to "etc." and used at the end of a list to show that there are more items, but they are too similar or numerous to name them all.

Ipsa facto: By the fact itself

This often misused term denotes when something is true by its very nature, or a direct result of an action. For example, if you didn't stop your friend from stealing you are ipso facto an accomplice.

Mea culpa: Through my own fault

This is Latin for "my bad," a short phrase to accept blame and apologize for something going wrong.

Per diem: For each day

This phrase is used in legal and accounting business to refer to payment rendered on a daily basis rather than as an annual salary or hourly rate. For example, if a nurse works on a per diem basis, she is paid by the day and does not have a long-term contract.

Pro bono: For the good

This phrase is actually a shortened version of "pro bono publico," which means "for the greater good." It's a legal term that refers to doing work without pay as a donation of services. When a lawyer works "pro bono," it's for free because he or she believes in the cause.
